¹Apportionment effective with congressional election two years after census.
²Original apportionment made in Constitution, pending first census.
³No apportionment was made in 1920.
⁴These figures are not based on any census, but indicate the provisional representation accorded newly admitted states by Congress, pending the next census.
⁵Twenty members were assigned to Massachusetts, but seven of these were credited to Maine when that area became a state.
⁶Temporarily 435, but temporarily increased two seats by Congress when Alaska and Hawaii became states.
